History of Treverva and Lamanva 5

In 1810, a license had been granted at the Bishop's Registry in Exeter, for worship at "a house at the entrance of western end of the village called Treverva", and in 1812 another license was issued for a "house newly built on the south side of Treverva". The Tithe Map shows a building in the ownership of the Wesleyan Methodist Society and this continued as a chapel until the completion of the present Chapel, the foundation stone of which was laid in 1889. The previous chapel then became two cottages, as it remains today.

By 1841 the community had increased considerably, and from the Census that year we find that there were 11 dwellings in Treverva, their occupants, other than the farmers, included a wheelwright, two stonemasons, two blacksmiths, two shoemakers, a dairywomen and several agricultura workers. The Winn family were blacksmiths there for several generations and they were followed by Thomas Dale. From the Census of 1851, we learn there were fifteen dwellings and these included a grocer's shop kept by Miss Francis who was also a "dame schoolmistress".

By this time, Mayne's Tenement, "part of the Barton of Treverva" as it had been called in an advertisement in the Gazette of 1806, had been renamed "Trevervah" and a later descripton in 1838 states "...A newly erected slated dwelling house, Barn, Stables, Piggeries ... with an excellent Pump of Water and many other conveniences ..."
